What is the difference between the Standard Level Diploma and the Advanced Level Diploma?

The Standard level is ideal for those already employed in a junior position or students at school who are considering working after senior school qualifications.

At Standard Level, the qualification recognises achievement at a level generally acceptable for employment or progression to further study. This Level is designed for people developing the capacity to work without direct supervision. Candidates are expected to develop a sound base of knowledge and understanding and be able to apply concepts to their working environments. There are no formal candidate entry requirements for the Cambridge International Diploma in Business at Standard level, but consideration should be given to a candidate's qualification history and experience. It is the Centre's responsibility to ensure the suitability of a candidate for entry to this course.

The Cambridge International Diploma in Business (Standard Level) enables students to demonstrate:

- * an understanding of the key business concepts
- * application of skills to real work environments
- * an ability to think and work independently

The Advanced level is more suitable for supervisors and general managers. At Advanced Level, the qualification recognises achievement at a level suitable for employment in supervisory or junior management roles or progression to higher study. Candidates are not only expected to develop a clear knowledge and application of the key concepts and subject areas, but also to analyse and evaluate ideas and proposals.

An Advanced Level Diploma enables students to demonstrate:

- * progression in the development of skills and knowledge
- * the capacity to manage complex and unfamiliar situations
- * the development of a problem-solving approach in real-work contexts.

How long does the Business Diploma take?

At Standard Level, each module is based around approximately 40 hours of time. At Advanced Level this increases to approximately 60 hours per module.

These are only guidelines, and will vary depending on individuals' prior knowledge and experience, as well as the environment and structure of delivery.

How is the Diploma certificated?

Certification is available at a number of stages in the Diploma in Business. Candidates who complete the two Core Modules will receive a Cambridge International Diploma Core Certificate.

Completion of two additional Optional Modules leads to the Cambridge International Diploma in Business.

It is also possible to study for individual Modules, for which module certificates are awarded.

Can the Diploma be undertaken in other languages?

The Diplomas in Business at Standard and Advanced levels are only available in English.

When are the examination sessions for the timetabled examinations?

They are in May and in October – for details please see the Administrative Guide for the year of examination.

Do candidates need to attend regular classes in order to study for a Diploma in Business?

Candidates must be registered with a Centre in order to be able to take the examinations and for their assignment to be assessed. It must be stressed that it is in the Candidates' own interest that they receive some form of instruction, either self-study or via distance learning, as preparation for the examination. It is vital, before they enter for the examinations, to ensure that they have covered the content of the modules and that they have had some test of their knowledge plus feedback on their performance. Experience has shown that candidates who have not practiced on past question papers or who have not been advised on examination technique will often fail to do well in the actual examination. The syllabus, resource list and one set of question papers is available on the CIE public site at www.cie.org.uk (follow the links for vocational qualifications). A fuller set of resources and past question papers are available on the teacher support site, but access to this is limited to teachers who are registered at CIE Centres.
